Tom began as a golf professional in 2007 as a student of the PGA Professional Golf Management program. He became a PGA member in 2011, and has been at Rose City Golf Course his entire golfing career.

Prior to becoming a PGA member Tom was a teacher in Portland Public Schools for 31 years. Golf has allowed Tom to continue his passion of teaching. In addition, it has given him the opportunity to learn about the golf business from his mentor at Rose City, Hank Childs.

Tom believes that golf can be enjoyed at many different levels. Golf is fun, and the process of learning and improving should be fun as well. Tom's philosophy is that everyone can learn and this process of learning never stops. There is always something more to learn about the golf swing and about how to manage a round.

Tom's goal as a teacher is to assist his students in their learning process. Utilizing video and teaching aids, Tom is dedicated to help his students understand the golf swing and the process of making adjustments to their current skills.

Tom is the Director for the Junior Golf Camps at Rose City Golf Course as well as the coach of the PGA Jr. League teams at the course, growing both programs year over year to provide young golfer's opportunities to learn to play golf.
